WATERING.

The water tank for the wallaby area has a moderate to thick buildup of dark green algae along the sides and bottom of the tank.

A buildup of algae in the water tank can be a source of possible disease or health hazards if not cleaned and sanitized properly.

The licensee must clean the water tank as frequently as necessary to prevent the buildup of algae and keep the tank and drinking water clean and sanitary.

Inspection Report

The goat platform has a hole in the boarded floor approximately 1ft x 2 ft that opens to the ground approximately 3 feet down that needs to be repaired. There are several nails along the edge of the platform and near the stairs that need to be hammered in or removed that have worked their way up and are protruding 1-2 inches. There is a fence gate lying on the ground in the camel feeding yard, and two pet carriers and some yard tools in the wallaby area that need to be removed as they are un-necessary clutter in the animal yards.

The hole and nails on the goat platform could be a potential source of injury if an animal fell through the hole in the floor or snagged on one of the protruding nails. The clutter in the camel and wallaby yards could cause injury if the animals get caught up in the fence lying on the ground, or trip over the yard tools(pitchfork, shovel, old can, brush, carriers etc).

The licensee needs to repair the goat platform and pick up and remove any clutter in the areas where the regulated animals live.
