Requirements and application

Licenses are issued for approved sites. The facility's website states that the facility has moved to a new address a few miles from the old site address. The facility's facebook pages show posts on both 3/13/23 and 3/20/23 that the facility is 'moving this week'. During the previous two inspections the licensee and facility representative were told that if the facility were to move the animals that USDA needed to be notified in writing of the new site address so the new site could be approved for regulated activity. Another inspector reminded the licensee via a phone call on 3/17/23 that she needed to submit the new address. Review of the Animal Care electronic database shows no notice that a new site address was submitted to USDA Animal Care. A facility must notify Animal Care of new sites in order to have the new site approved for regulated activity and ensure that the new site meets all Animal Welfare Act regulations and standards. Correct by notifying USDA Animal Care of the new site address.

moving. Animals were observed inside the facility via the windows which give a view into a portion of the facility.

The facility website gives a second new address for the facility several miles away. A visit to this address was made.

There was a closed gate to the property.

Attempts were made to reach the licensee via two phone numbers (voicemail messages left), text and email. No response was received by 1:30pm.
